London Transport Dinner and Auction 2024

Guildhall, 2 October

MAYOR OF LONDON

Why attend?

Hosted by Transport for London, and now celebrating its 18th year, the annual London Transport Dinner and Auction in support of London Transport Museum, provides an unparalleled networking opportunity with colleagues and friends from across the transport industry.

Join us as we celebrate the 70th anniversary of the Routemaster bus and another incredible year at the Museum as we connect and network with more than 450 key industry guests and business leaders, including the Commissioner of Transport for London and Mayor of London.

Experience the grandeur of a Grade I listed London landmark as we make a triumphant return to one of the City of London's most historic and prestigious venues, the Guildhall.

A perfect location that mirrors London Transport Museum's focus on the capital's history and culture, and our commitment to support and inspire young Londoner's into careers in the transport industry.

This prestigious, black-tie event begins with a welcome drinks in the Victorian neo-Gothic setting of the Guildhall's Old Library, followed by a four-course, silver-service dinner in the splendid surroundings of the Great Hall. Enjoy the fun and excitement of the silent and live auctions packed with unique items and money can't buy experiences, before joining us in the Old Library at the end of the evening for networking over post-dinner drinks.

Your generosity and support through your table purchases, bids, and auction item donations raise vital income for the Museum's charitable work with children and young people, fostering a lifelong passion for STEM, climate action and preparing young people for the world of work.

Explore this brochure now to discover the opportunities to get involved and support the best event in the transport industry calendar.

On behalf of London Transport Museum, thank you for your support and we look forward to welcoming you on the evening.

Your support makes a difference

Since its inception in 2006, the London Transport Dinner and Auction has raised a spectacular amount in support of the Museum's charitable heritage preservation work and our education and employability programmes.

These programmes address the skills gap in our industry whilst supporting more women and people from under-represented backgrounds into careers.

On the evening you will hear first-hand from some of the young Londoners the Museum has supported and inspired to take on an exciting career journey in our industry. Route into Work graduate Martha Urquhart, was the star of the evening at last year's event, speaking passionately about the Museum's role in changing her perception of engineering and the positive impact of the programme in enabling her to secure an apprenticeship with TfL to kickstart her career in the transport industry.

‘Route into Work has allowed me to see broader professional development, helped changed my perceptions about a career in the transport sector, and helped me to grow in my resilience, communication skills and self confidence.’
